

The Fox and the Crow - Present

A hungry fox walks in the forest.
Suddenly, he sees a crow in a tree.
The crow has a piece of cheese in his mouth and loves to eat that cheese for breakfast.

The fox thinks, sits under the tree and looks up to the crow.
"What a beautiful bird you are !" the fox says.

"Your feather is as black as night,
your eyes are so beautiful, but it's too bad that you can't sing,
If you could sing, you would be the most beautiful bird".

The crow listens and thinks, "the fox is right, I'm so beautiful, but I can't sing as well as other birds".

Then, the crow opens his mouth and the cheese falls on the ground and the fox eats it.

"Thank you for breakfast" the fox says, "I see you have a voice, but where is your brain? "
