Lecture Time

A blurred photograph of a lecture hall. In the foreground, the backs of several audience members are visible as they sit in rows of seats, many with their hands raised in applause. In the background, a speaker stands on a stage with arms outstretched, next to a tall, cylindrical podium. A large white rectangular box is superimposed on the left side of the image, containing the text 'Lecture Time' in a bold, black, sans-serif font.

Look at photos, about two artists, Stephen Wiltshire and Tai Lihua. what kind of artist are they? Answer questions 1-5 for each artist

1. What couldn't Stephen/Tai do?
2. What is Stephen's/Tai's kind of art?
3. When did Stephen/Tai start doing this?
4. What did Stephen's/Tai's teachers do?
5. How do we know they are successful?

Stephen Wiltshire is autistic and couldn't speak until he was five. His first words were 'paper' and 'pencil' – the same first words as Picasso's! At school, he started drawing pictures of London and his teachers gave him the name 'the human camera'. He has drawn many fantastic pieces of art and he's sold them all over the world. One of his drawings is a 5.7-metre-long picture of New York. He drew it after he spent just 20 minutes in a helicopter in the sky above the city. He has his own art gallery in London. He hasn't opened a gallery in New York, but he wants to – he's just looking for the right place to do it.

■ autistic having a mental condition that makes it difficult for somebody to communicate or form relationships with other people

Tai Lihua couldn't hear from the age of two after an illness. She is deaf, but this hasn't stopped her dream of dancing. When she was a child, the teacher at her school for deaf children asked the class to 'feel' the sound of a drum through their feet. From that moment, she wanted to be a dancer. Tai joined a dance company when she was 15 and she's become one of the most famous dancers in China. She's danced in more than 75 countries and thousands of people have watched her, including at the Beijing Paralympics.
